

LOBBYISTS HAMPER MEXICAN POLICIES

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington.—All the various influences which managed to keep the relations between the Wilson administration and Mexico in an atmosphere of controversy, mutual suspicion, propaganda and selfishness interfering with an effort to bring the two governments back together, are at work trying this time to prevent the Harding administration from reaching an understanding with the Oregon government.

It is true that the conditions laid down by Secretary Coby as a step toward recognition are in the main what the new administration here would accept. If the two governments were the only factor in the situation, the solution might be worked out amicably. But certain American interests in Mexico, and the hand of the United States and Mexico City are determined to show Gen. Oregon that unless he comes into line the same process is being worked out in the same manner. Notwithstanding the fact that conditions in Mexico are greatly improved over what they were during the Carranza regime and are closer to the conditions in the United States, they have been since Diaz held power, the impression sought to be created is that Mexico is back in the same state of anarchy as she was four or five years ago.

To Help by Evolution.

Such discussions as the Harding cabinet has had on matters of foreign policy have been characterized by a desire to help Mexico by evolution rather than revolution. There is not the slightest ground for believing that the Harding administration would countenance a counter-revolutionary propaganda if it were a position to control it and the danger to the relations of the two countries today is that impressions sent out broadcast concerning state department policy will be accepted as authoritative when such is not the case.

The trouble seems to be, of course, that President Harding is sparing. He believes possibly that recognition will come in the form of a treaty, but accepting the conditions laid down by the United States. He is willing to assent to the desires of the United States unofficially, but unwilling to accept the conditions in the form of a treaty. He contends that the anti-American feeling in Mexico is still strong enough to prevent him politically if he appears to be yielding to the United States.

Carranza's Mexican Values.

However that may be, the Oregon government is suffering now from the fact that the oral pledges of the Carranza government, in its policy of promises proved worthless and the great body of Americans who have interests in Mexico insist that this time something substantial shall be given as a guarantee that the Carranza government will be maintained.

Voice of the People

The Janesville Daily Gazette has always had its columns open for discussion of questions of interest to the people. The very nature of the position of the Gazette in the community demands that it should be the voice of the People. The city of Janesville is in the midst of an interesting campaign for many city officers. Every candidate has his or her friends and they are usually strong partisans for their election. In order that any expressions in the interest of the candidates may be made, the columns of the Gazette will be open to such communications, when signed and the name of the writer is printed. No anonymous communications will be used. The names of the writers will be printed in all cases. These letters must be limited to 250 words.

Editor Gazette:

When a boy was used to sing "Uncle Sam is rich enough to send us all school" Uncle Sam was giving away land to all sorts of schools, some for a common school fund, some for the founding and supporting of colleges of agriculture and some for universities.

Uncle Sam is still in the educational business. Right here in Rock county he is offering a school for every farmer and every farmer's boy. He has said, "I will put up so much money for a county representative providing the state and the county will play fair and go their share."

What a great opportunity for the farmer to keep abreast of the times and it is extremely necessary for a farmer as well as for anyone working in any other line of service to keep up with the times and the times are changing rapidly these days. That new booklet from our own college of agriculture, "New Facts in Agriculture," is a booklet that the art of farming is not advancing with other arts.

Uncle Sam is offering to the boys and girls of Rock county the opportunity of going to college. He says under certain rules you may be a member of the pig club or a member of the corn club or a clubing club or a garden club or a canning club and I will send you a booklet. So many of these clubs have been organized and Uncle Sam is quickly feeling the bill.

Uncle Sam has also said for the boys and girls of Rock county, "Under certain restrictions you may have training in vocational agriculture in your high school and I will pay one-half of the teachers' salary."

Allen D. West, Agricultural Instructor.

Editor Gazette:

I want the privilege of again using the Voice of the People because I want to give expression in a limited way on some of the questions that should concern every voter in the city. I am not doing this in the interest of any candidate for any office. I have had no conversation with any of them about city affairs, except a few words I exchanged with Mr. Welch. So I am not a politician. I am simply looking at things from a citizen's viewpoint.

To begin with we want more sewers. We want sewers where they are absolutely needed. But where they are not needed for immediate use they should not be built at the present time, regardless of what the board of public works may recommend.

So far as water extensions are concerned, the mayor is working on the principle of not laying any water pipe that will not bring a fair return on the money invested. Perhaps that plan is all right, if it is rigidly lived up to.

The mayor in his political announcement says he is mayor to answer for the city. He has ever been ignored. Let us see.

In the summer of 1919 a petition was presented to the board of public works, signed by every property owner, for a water main to be laid along Mineral Point avenue from Pine Street west, approximately 642 feet, along which there would have been, due and probably quite near, off water at that time. Nothing was heard of it for some time, until one of the first ward aldermen was asked about the matter. He replied there would not be users enough to justify the expense. The mayor was afterwards seen. He said there was no money for an extension now. In the summer of 1920 the mayor promised the extension in the fall. It is not done yet. So much for that promise.

Across the river at the intersection of Blaine and Garfield avenues a water main was laid and run east on Blaine avenue approximately 2,000 feet, and not a house along the street until the end of the line is reached, where there are 10 new houses at the end of a road run by Carlo & Welsh, only six of which are occupied.

Now this notice, that water main was laid for no other apparent reason than to make that property more saleable, and I presume a sewer would also have been laid only there was no outlet for it. Perhaps the city gets a better revenue from six houses at the end of a road than it would from the eight houses along the 642 feet on Mineral Point.

Business Revival Here

Factors say that business is picking up but it is only natural that it will take longer to build up than it did go down.

One of the causes, of course, has been in the farmer. He was disappointed when he could not get the price he had every reason to expect and so has not been buying implements. Farmers in this part of the country are not as hard hit as they are in some places.

"People have not to have clothing and things to eat and it is only a matter of time before they must buy. They are being urged to buy and they must soon anyway. They've got to have things to eat and wear."

The point of view of conditions depends on the business and the merchant's outlook will differ from that of the banker.

Clothing Affected.

According to W. H. Duddington, the keynote of the whole situation is in having things on an equal basis. Many businesses say they have felt the depression but they really have not and must get down to the standard set by the dealers in clothing and groceries, who have been the hardest hit. All the prices must be high or all must be low and as some are now going down, they must all follow. Things will be upset until this occurs.

Railroads Must Come Down.

The merchants cannot go on reducing their prices when the railroads realize this and are considering lowering their rates. Much of the trouble lies in the fact that some of the business men take a loss.

Loss on Clothing.

The merchants of wearing apparel took their losses last fall and are still cutting prices while in some businesses there has been no reduction and those running them are trying to hang on until the readjustment is made so that they will get through without loss. It is mainly a question of greed and as soon as all the people realize that they must lose and they may as well do it now, then the readjustment will come.

Optimism Expressed by Sidney Rostwick of J. M. Drexler and Sons.

"Business has been picking up great since the last month of 1920, up until that time it was very poor, but the last month's sales will compare favorably with those of the same time in 1920. We look for the increase to continue."

Business Growing.

"Our business is on the increase but we need a little warmer weather to move our spring wearing apparel. We did a nice business the 10 days preceding Easter and with a change of weather now things should begin to go along faster. People are not going to buy clothes for spring when we're having wintry weather—that's human nature."

W. J. Cannon.

Editor Gazette:

In reading over the mayor's political campaign program printed in the Gazette I noticed that no mention of a nature presented to him by citizens had been ignored.

I surely think the mayor of the city of Janesville must have suffered a lapse of memory about that time. For there was one petition that I know of which was most certainly ignored.

At the time preparations were being made to pave Center avenue last year, when labor and material were at the highest cost, 20 per cent of the property owners on that street signed a petition against having a parkway, or flower bed, constructed through the center of the street. This petition was laid aside, and forgotten by the mayor and city council, but not seem to have no voice in such matters.

It is certainly a shame that the people, who are most concerned, have no voice in such matters.

Yours for a better city government.

J. H. SHEKLEY.

Evansville Woman Dies

While Visiting Relatives

(Special to Gazette.)

Evansville.—Mrs. William Phelps of this city died at the home of her relatives at De Pere, Wis., early yesterday morning as a result of a stroke of paralysis which she suffered Friday. She went there a month ago for a visit.

Mrs. Phelps was 50 years old and was born and reared in Brown county. She came to Evansville 15 years ago with her husband, who has conducted a barber shop here ever since. He was called to De Pere, Saturday, for a water main to be laid along Mineral Point avenue from Pine Street west, approximately 642 feet, along which there would have been, due and probably quite near, off water at that time. Nothing was heard of it for some time, until one of the first ward aldermen was asked about the matter. He replied there would not be users enough to justify the expense. Wool Pool Again FOR ROCK COUNTY

Nearly All of County Wool Has Been Sold and Money on Deposit.

The Rock County Farm Bureau will advocate another wool pool this year, according to announcements made Tuesday.

There has been a wool marketing committee appointed by the state bureau for devising a plan for financing and marketing the 1921 Wisconsin wool clip.

The bureau is bucking a move to have a national wool sales organization, instead of separate state pools. State pools enter the market and compete against the pool of other states. This year it is expected the growers who do pool will put their clip into a government accredited warehouse, where the wool is to be properly graded so that it can be sold direct to the mills. A charge of no more than a fourth of a cent a pound will be made.

Wool Being Sold.

Four-fifths of the wool pooled in Wisconsin, including that of Rock county, has now been sold. Only about $25,000 of the 1,320,000 pounds originally pooled by growers in Wisconsin and Illinois now remains unsold. Prices ranging from 30 to 37 cents a pound have been realized and the best grades are being held for a more favorable market.

The money received for wools sold is now on deposit and drawing interest and returns are to be made as soon as the pool is disposed of, according to a statement from the state federation. The wool market remains feeble and with a poor price.

The general opinion is that after normal business conditions return, there will be a considerable improvement in the demand for wool, and there is a confidence that wools pooled in 1921 will move more promptly and at more satisfactory prices than was the case of the 1920 pool," reads the statement received by County Agent Gustav Tunesky.

"The wool pool is the only way for the farmer," said the county agent.

Should Try Phosphate.

Rock county farmers are being offered superphosphate 45 1/2 per cent at reasonable prices.

The use of this superphosphate is being urged for the state and government soil conservation service, which says that the county are lacking in lime and phosphate.

"We want the farmer to try this fertilizer," said the county agent. "That does not mean he should use a whole lot of it at first, but he should experiment with the phosphate to determine how much good it will do him. When he can see by increased stands of grain how much it affects the soils, he will use it. It does not take much phosphate to treat the soils, about a bag an acre."

Grant Third in Pin Singles--Elks' Fight Date Arranged

Copyright 1920 by Geo. McManus.

BOUTS SCHEDULED FOR APRIL 27 AS ORIGINALLY MADE

Next boxing show of the Janesville Athletic club of the Elks will be held April 27 as originally planned. It was announced by Business Manager Rotstein Wednesday. The legal tangle has been satisfactorily fixed up and the fight will go on without a hitch.

Saturday Rotstein and Matchmaker Riley will journey to Chicago to watch Omaha (Kid) Schaefer and several others work out. They expect to make a booking for the final and the semi-final.

Since the first fight two weeks ago, the local club has been swamped with literature and letters from managers and promoters having fighters they want to bring here.

TRAINING CAMP JOTS

Corsicana, Texas was Wednesday's stop on the White Sox barnstorming tour, meeting the Ft. Worth, Texas league team, Cyril Slapnicka, former club pitcher, appeared against the Sox Tuesday at Brownwood, pitching for an Elks' team, the Sox winning 12 to 1.

Another game with the San Francisco Pacific Coast league team is scheduled for Wednesday. Vaclun went the full nine innings against the Seals Tuesday and would have been easily except for weak support. Black drove in the winning run, 4 to 3, for the Cubs in the tenth.

Unless in the American association will not be allowed to impose fines on unruly players this season under word sent out to club owners by President Hickey. They may commend him to the league head however, and will permit banishing a player from the field if deemed necessary.

BADGER-ILLINOIS BALL LEAGUE IS FORMED

Platteville, Wis.—The organization of the Wisconsin-Illinois baseball league has been perfected, six teams composing the league — Calumet, Platteville, Lancaster, Livingston, Shullsburg and Highland.

AND ALL HE DID WAS—SIGH!

John Hancock was a great baseball fan. John was also a little forgetful. On a particularly hot day early in the summer of 1921, he finished the usual big Sunday dinner, sat on the porch a little while to let it settle and then strolled easily up to the ball grounds. There were only a few people going that way, but none turned in at the gate with him. Being absent minded he strolled past the ticket booth and took his seat in the grandstand.

Now John was in the habit of taking his Sunday paper along with him and so he read it for a while. Tiring of reading, he pulled out his watch to note the time.

"What the thunder," he muttered. "It's 3:30. What's the matter; the game hasn't even started yet."

Then he looked up and discovered he was all alone in the big fair grounds. He scratched his head.

"Funny, I guess I got my dates mixed and the boys are playing out of town."

"You poor nut," yelled the stable boy, "where have you been? There ain't no ball team any more."

And then John woke up.

Perhaps this is a little romance in dreamland, but you'll be sitting on your porch next summer thinking of the days of real sport, unless you become a member of the Tractor City Athletic Association by putting your John Hancock to the subscription list at $5 a line.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.—Written and Publication Authorized by Henry C. Klein and paid for by him at the rate of 85c per inch.

HENRY C. KLEIN

Asks for Your Support for Mayor

To the Voters:

If you elect me Mayor of the City of Janesville, I will give to the people an account of my stewardship as Mayor day by day, and every day, and not feel it necessary to give an account of my stewardship at the end of my term, only, and at a time when I am seeking reelection.

The people will be alert to observe the fact that as my campaign has not been commenced until now, if any "falsehood and campaign propaganda" (as is alleged by my opponent) it must be that it is being circulated by some of the over-zealous supporters of my opponent (whose campaign has been under way for some time past) and in their own interest, instead of being circulated in my interest or in the interest of the people of Janesville.

In this propaganda of falsehood that is being circulated, I am charged with the commission of almost every crime that a man could possibly commit, but, up to the present moment, the propagandists have not found a single basis in truth for any of their scurrilous accusations, and, as the falsity of the charges is so apparent to and well known by my fellow citizens, I shall not insult their intelligence by attempting to refute any of them.

My campaign will be conducted by my friends under my personal direction and without the aid of committees or a financial manager, and with funds exclusively my own; and neither myself nor my friends will conduct a "button-hole" campaign, nor enter any man's place of business to embarrass him by political solicitation in my behalf, or to make any threats, veiled or otherwise.

The greatest need of the present time is the election of a man as Mayor who cannot be swept from the right course on a wave of ecstatic enthusiasm or diverted by public clamor or enticed by the allurements of self interest—a man who, as Mayor, will act at all times only after careful consideration of the interests of all persons and all things concerned.

We are now in a period of radical readjustment of business and of industrial conditions, and great care should be exercised to the end that no advantage to our city be lost; our expenditures should be made to produce the largest returns to the people; our city debt should be reduced as rapidly as possible, but I believe that the city should keep abreast of the times by making needed improvements as fast as it can be done in keeping with the growth of the city, both in size and importance, and without laying too heavy tax burdens upon our people.

I am opposed to having our property in this city revalued by any Board for the purpose of a further increase, in order that still larger sums of money may be taken from the people as taxes while, at the same time, making it appear that the tax rate is low. The taxpayer is not so much concerned about the low tax rate as about the large sum paid as tax.

Inflated values may keep the tax rate low and make the amount of the tax high. It looks good on paper. It is fine campaign argument. But the people who pay the taxes understand it. The present Administration, in Public Announcement, boasts of the lavishness of its expenditures of the people's money, and sets forth a "partial list" of the "activities" of the Administration, and in this "partial list" makes account for ONE AND ONE QUARTER MILLION DOLLARS used. According to the figures given, it cost the people $5,926.13 for every block paved by the present Administration.

The people are entitled to, and should have, a "complete list" of the "activities" of the present Administration, in order that they may know just what the present Administration has cost them, and be thereby better enabled to answer the question asked by the present Administration "Am I competent to manage your affairs?" Lavish expenditure of public money by any man or set of men does not necessarily indicate business ability of a high order. A greater business instinct, and one more to be trusted, is shown by a man who, through his own efforts alone, provides a competency for himself and his family during the span of years that constitute an average lifetime, while at the same time expending his own money in a manner to benefit his neighbors, his city, and generations yet to come.

If elected, I shall conserve, care for, and expend the public funds as carefully as I would my own money. Every dollar will be made to buy one dollar's worth of value for the people. I am opposed to buying any property outside of the present city limits, with public funds, for use as a recreation park, until such time in the future as it may be done without adding to the already heavy tax burden upon the people, or until we have ample school facilities to educate our children under sanitary conditions.

I am in favor of, and will strive for, the elimination of dangerous railroad grade crossings where they now exist, and, if elected, will either see that such dangerous crossings are done away with, or else stop talking about it. I believe in open pre-election promises to the people, and the carrying out of those promises after election, and for that purpose I publish a statement of principles, which will be carried out by me, if elected.

I leave it to the people to say by their votes whether or not they believe that the present city Administration is "as efficient an organization in the City Hall as any city of our size can show in this state or any other," and if the people do not so believe, or if they believe that I can and will give an administration more efficient, or more in the interest of all of the people, I respectfully ask them to elect me Mayor and then pass judgment upon my administration as I give to them "an account of my stewardship" day by day and every day.

HENRY C. KLEIN.

A Sweetheart at Thirty

The Story of a Woman's Transformation
BY MARION RUBINCAM

CHAPTER CIVIL
A LONG DRIVE

As we slid away from the gate of my old home, I turned around for a last look. For it was almost that I should not see the place in Henly Falls for years. And when I did, it would be as Mrs. Francis Meade, as the wife of a wealthy business man, as the mistress of a lovely home in the city, as the mother—by adoption—of my beloved Violet.

The farmhouse was not romantic to look at. It was the sort of a place one might be glad to leave. Farmhouses are supposed to be rather quaint and attractive, with long, low lines, thick walls and open porches. And some are. But the one I have found one—but that does not belong to this part of the story.

Our farmhouse was built in the days when a narrow-chested, stolid architect was supposed to be a good one. It was a long, low affair, with a roof that ran to two sharp peaks, it was not broad enough. The windows were too small, so in winter the rooms seemed dark and in summer there was no breeze.

As I looked at the last look, thinking I should feel sentimental, and wondering why I didn't. Father at the gate waved his apron, Jim had disappeared, James showed his smile, regret by the way, and he stood there. Poor James! We had grown very fond of each other during our month together.

The other houses came into view as I left the gate. I had seen them all before. Our house was on the edge of the village; in a few minutes we were running the length of Main street, past the few shops that had come to be called the "business center." Some of the village women waved as I passed, and a group stood together watching the car out of sight. I could guess their comments.

"And then I sighed, I was free of it—free of Henly Falls, its narrow circle which I never liked, its gossip of personalities which bored me, its remoteness from the world which I had no sympathy for."

"Sorry to go?" Francis asked, hearing the sigh.

I turned and smiled at him.

"No," I said simply. "I never was so glad of anything in my life."

He laughed, steering the car expertly around a loaded wagon and running faster as we struck a smooth road.

"That leaves me out," he said.

"No," I answered, "for you're taking me away."

For a long time I sat silent, busy with my own thoughts, and Francis tactfully let me alone. But the best of men are materialists around me. I think, Francis, finally broke into my reveries by asking:

"Are you hungry?"

"I came back to earth with a bang and nodded, remembering suddenly that I had been too upset to eat much breakfast."

"There's a good hotel to lunch at in the next town," he informed me. And we talked of unimportant things until we were once more on our way.

"What do you think you accomplished by staying away so long, and keeping me lonely for a whole month?" he asked during the afternoon.

"I don't think I actually accomplished anything," I confessed. "I made myself lonely, too, and uncomfortable because of an idea."

"You're not the first martyr to an idea—or an ideal," he smiled as he spoke.

"What I accomplished was only

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 18 years of age and in love with a boy 19. We have been going together for over a year. He takes me wherever I want to go, and yet he goes with another girl on the sly. He says I love first. Whenever he takes anyone else any place he tells me he doesn't.

Do not give the young man reason to think you object to his taking other girls places. Since you are not engaged, there is no reason why he should not have other girls, or why you should not go with other young men. Do not ask for explanations or show resentment when you find he has been out with other girls. He will like you all the better if you do not try to have a tight hold on him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a hard-working girl and everything I earn is just enough to keep me going. I have a young man friend who gave me a diamond ring about two months ago and we are to be married some time in the summer. I know he would be very good to me if I married him.

There is another friend who is very far from here. My mother and aunt always wanted me to marry him. His mother and father think a whole lot of me. They are telling us to get married, but I did not know him very well personally, only by writing to each other.

I know he did not care very much for me then, but when I told him I got a diamond ring and was to be married he wrote me such a letter

The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR TESSIE:

Your original (if nothing else) remarks on the subject of Harding's cabinet, gave me the thought that although we can't all be members of the cabinet, every man ought at least be secretary of his own interior, which seems to be absolutely impossible when you're out on the road at the mercy of these so-called hotels. I don't know what their system of choosing cooks is, but whatever it is it's bad for the blood. It seems to me as if they must make it a rule to always select a man with a mean disposition and no sense of taste.

Now don't go getting the idea, Tessie, that I never think of anything but food, because as a matter of fact food never enters my thoughts except at meal times and say an hour or two before. And not only that, but if a man is naturally a philosopher, he can philosophize about food just as well as about anything else. For example, I can never see a slough of pork and beans in front of me without reflecting what a great thing friendship is, one and inseparable, and all that sort of higher thought.

And on the other hand, whenever I'm served pork without beans, or ham without eggs, or cabbage without corned beef, the thought always strikes me that even marriage isn't so binding after all. Nothing personal, Tessie—I realize that our particular marriage is pork and beans that no man's hand shall put asunder, frankfurters and sour kraut one and indivisible. But I don't poetry aside, Tessie, I wouldn't know what to do without you. You're so easy to be away from, somehow, and what greater comfort could a traveling man have?

I'm sending the baby a little charm made out of elephant tusk. You can hang it around his neck and maybe it will start his teeth coming through at last. Your affectionate husband, JOE.

What Shall I Do?

Answered by VIRGINIA PAGE

How to Order.

"Dear Miss Page—I have been keeping company with a boy from a neighboring town. He calls me quite often on the telephone and always asks how I am feeling. Is he correct in so doing, and if so what should I reply? Could you please advise me what to order in a cafe after having been to the theater? A short time ago I saw a girl give quite a large order and more than half of it remained untouched—was this rude?—L.W. & B. 12.

Many people say "How are you?" just as a form of salutation, as you would say "How do you do?" Or it may be that the young man is so genuinely fond of you that he really is anxious to know how you are feeling, which is rather sweet of him, don't you think? You need only tell the truth in answering him—"Feeling fine, thank you, and I hope you are," or "Bad cold this week, but I hope you are well."

The girl you saw in the restaurant was not so rude as she was extravagant and unkind to her escort. What you should order depends upon where you go, and what you like to eat at night, and how much you think your escort has a right to spend.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Page in care of the "What Shall I Do?" department will be answered in these columns in due time. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope

NOVEL RICE DISHES

Scalloped Rice With Cheese—One and one-half cups rice, one and one-half teaspoons salt, six small onions, one pepper, two and one-half cups boiling water, one can tomato soup, one-half pound of cheese, two table-spoons fat.

Fry onions in fat, then add rice and boiling salted water. Boil until rice is nearly done, then add soup. When rice has taken up almost all of the liquid, slice in the pepper and add the cheese (cubed). Bake until brown.

Rice Walnut Loaf—Beat one egg, add three-quarters cup milk, one and one-half cups of cooked rice, sage, salt and pepper to taste, one cup walnut meats chopped fine.

Mix well, put in a buttered baking dish, bake 30 minutes.

DELICIOUS CUSTARDS

Maple Custard—Two cups scalded milk, three egg yolks, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cornstarch and one-half cup maple syrup. Scald the milk, beat the eggs, add the maple syrup, salt and cornstarch and pour the scalded milk over this mixture; strain into moulds (rinsed out with cold water); set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm and puffy.

Custard With Fruit—Very often good boiled custard can be served to advantage with fruit. The fruit adds attractiveness to the custard and so tempts the appetite. A few prunes, neatly cut in pieces, can be covered with custard, dates can be used in the same way, oranges peeled out in dice can be added to it or a spoon of apple snow can be placed on top of a dish of custard.

DELICIOUS SALADS

Herring Salad With Potatoes—Put two salt herrings for about two hours in milk or water. Remove skin and bones and cut in pieces. Peel eight to ten large, hot potatoes, cut in cubes, mix with onion, pepper, if necessary a little salt, two parts oil, one part vinegar, one tablespoon sour cream and the herring. If too dry, add warm broth or water. Let stand a few hours before serving.

Egg Salad—Cut five three hard-boiled eggs and four stalks of celery. Serve on lettuce with salad dressing or mayonnaise.

Cocoanut Salad—One cup of shredded cocoanut, one cup diced celery, one-half cup chopped celery, strain juice of one-half lemon. Mix the cocoanut with the bananas, celery and lemon juice, then arrange nests of shredded crisp lettuce leaves in a salad bowl and fill them with the mixture. Serve very cold with mayonnaise.

The Big Town Round Up

By WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE.

The young man moved closer and put a strong arm around her shoulders. "Don't you worry, Miss. Your big brother is on the job now. I've wanted to—kill myself—she faltered. "I tried to—in the river—and it was so black—I couldn't." The girl shivered with cold. She had been exposed to the night rain for hours without a coat.

He knew her story now in its essentials as well as he did later when she went out to him in confusion. And because she was who she was, born to lean on a stranger while he acquitted her of blame.

They swung into Broadway and passed taxis and a crowd of people with gay parties just out of the theaters. Young women in rich furs, wrapped from the cruelty of life by the caste system in which wealth had encased them, exchanged glances with sleek, well-dressed men. A ripple of care-free laughter floated to him across the gulf that separated this girl from them. By the cluster of lights he could see that she was a young life had maddled her soft youth. The bloom of her was gone, all the brave pride and joy of girlhood. It would probably never wholly return.

He saw in a vision the infinite procession of her hopeless sisters who had traveled the road from which he was rescuing her, saw them first as far as could be seen in the bluish light of the city, and then as they came to him, and again, after the world had misused them for its pleasure, lagged and tattered, with dragging steps trailing toward the oblivion that awaited them. He considered it life must always be so terribly wasted, made a bruised and broken thing instead of the fine, brave adventure for which it was meant.

Dinner Stories

"Why do you persist in hanging around the restaurant at this time? Have you designs on somebody in your show?" asked the side show manager.

"Yes," replied the young artist. "I have designs on your tattered old coat—and she hasn't paid for them yet."

Said the blind beggar who has been advised to have designs on your tattered old coat—and she hasn't paid for them yet.

"There's a lawyer in my town," says a member of the Chicago bar, "who is sometimes forgetful. He never at a loss to find himself in the worst predicament."

"Once he had been engaged to plead the case of an offender, and he subsequently began thus:

"I know the prisoner at the bar and he bears the character of being a most consummate and impudent scoundrel."

"At this point someone whispered to him that the prisoner was his client, when he immediately continued:

"But what great and good man ever lived who was not calumniated by many of his contemporaries?"

"So you'll never again send your husband to an employment agency to get a servant?" asked Mrs. Gaybock.

"Do you blame me?" asked Mrs. Gaybock. "The only question I asked the girl he hired was whether she could make him brew."

"Oh, where have you been, Billy boy, Billy boy?"

"Who is that? I do not recognize the voice, but it may be some of my old friends from the circus," any knowing that Billy's asked Mrs. Gaybock. "He promptly stuck his head under the canvas side and took a long look about."

"Nothing there," he quickly decided, "the other side of the tent came the inquiry in a singsong, high falsetto:

"Oh, where have you been, Billy boy, Billy boy?"

"Oh, where have you been, Charming Billy?"

By this time Billy's eyes commenced to bulge with wonder, for he was as susceptible to flattery as any.

"Wonder which of my friends is playing the joke on me. Come out, old fellow, and give me a fair chance," he demanded.

"Oh, where have you been, Billy boy, Billy boy?"

"Oh, where have you been, Charming Billy?"

"I've been to seek a wife, for the pleasure of my life, She's a young thing, And cannot leave her mother."

came the mocking answer. "If I could find the insolent fellow I would cure him of prying into other people's affairs. More trouble is made in this world by prying eyes than by any other one thing. That much I've learned in my short career. But there is nothing here except that box with the tin horn sticking out of the top. It must be someone is trying to play a practical joke on me."

"Billy crept all the way into the tent, for he still hoped to find one of his friends in hiding. Walking about cautiously to explore, he had all but reached the mysterious box when once more the voice began to repeat:

"Oh, where have you been, Billy boy, Billy boy?"

"Now I know who 'tis. It's one of those parrots who traveled with the circus, and that box must be her cage. They always wear the same old things, and tell of importance, and I'll teach her a much-needed lesson."

Backing away to gain a start, Billy made the attack and struck the box full in the center. Over it went all but a great clatter, and the noise summoned an attendant, who rushed in to see what had happened.

"Get out of here! Get out of here! You've smashed the greatest invention of the age," and stuck in hand, he started for Billy with wrath in his eye.

Deciding that discretion was much the better part of valor, Billy took quick refuge in precipitous flight. He crept under the side of the tent once more, but this time his departure was hampered a trifle by a nail prod from his pursuer.

(Wednesday will tell more of Billy's escapades at the fair.)
